DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Russ et al. (US 2004/0060063).

Regarding Claim 1: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus for playing back a digital stream generated by multiplexing a graphics stream and a video stream, comprising: a decoding unit operable to decode the graphics stream, and overlay a page including a plurality of graphics button members on a moving picture obtained by decoding the video stream (paragraph 0082 and fig. 4); an execution unit operable to, when a selection of one of the plurality of button members is confirmed, execute a command corresponding to the button member, to thereby perform a first control of switching the page to another page and a second control of specifying a button member to be focused in the other page (paragraph 0096); a status register operable to hold a button number of the specified button member (paragraph 0096); a judgment unit operable to judge whether the button number in the status register is invalid (paragraph 0096); and a setting unit operable to, if the button number in the status register is judged as being invalid, set the status register to an alternative button number

Regarding Claim 2: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus of claim 1, wherein: the graphics stream includes interactive control information that contains a plurality of sets of page information corresponding one-to-one to a plurality of pages, the plurality of sets of page information each showing button numbers of all button members included in a corresponding page (Fig. 13), and the judgment unit checks whether the button number in the status register is not shown in a set of page information corresponding to the other page, and judges the button number as being invalid if the button number is not shown in the set of page information (paragraph 0098).

Regarding Claim 3: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus of claim 2, wherein: the plurality of sets of page information each include default select information indicating whether, upon switching to the corresponding page, a button member to be focused as default is to be determined statically or dynamically (paragraph 0089); the playback apparatus further comprises an overwrite unit operable to, if default select information in the set of page information corresponding to the other page indicates the static determination, overwrite the status register with a value based on the default selection information in the set of page information (paragraph 0076); and the button number in the status register is maintained if the default select information in the set of page information indicates the dynamic determination (paragraph 0076).

Regarding Claim 4: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus of claim 2, wherein: the interactive control information further contains first time information (paragraph 0093); when playback of the video stream has reached a time shown by the first time information, the decoding unit overlays a page corresponding to a beginning one of the plurality of sets of page information in the interactive control information, on the moving picture (paragraph 0093); and the judgment unit also performs the judgment when the playback of the video stream has reached the time shown by the first time information (paragraph 0093).

Regarding Claim 5: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus of claim 4, wherein: the interactive control information further contains second time information (paragraph 0094); and the setting unit sets the status register to be invalid, when the playback of the video stream has reached a time shown by the second time information (paragraph 0094).

Regarding Claim 6: Russ et al. discloses a playback apparatus of claim 4, further comprising an initialization unit operable to, when a recording medium is loaded to the playback apparatus, initialize the status register to an invalid value, wherein: the judgment unit judges that the value in the status register is invalid, when the playback of the video stream has reached the time shown by the first time information (paragraph 0072); and the setting unit also performs the setting when the playback of the video stream has reached the time shown by the first time information (paragraph 0052).

Regarding Claim 6: Claim 7-8 are reject for the same subject matter as claims 1 discussed above.
